Finding the Burnham Hollow Ski Area

By Jon Mathewson

Two years ago, I received a copy of Jeremy K. Davis' book, "Lost Ski Areas of Southern Vermont." That Christmas gift launched me on a year and a half long history adventure.

The book closely documents the ski areas which sprang up in Vermont's southern four counties from the 1930s through 1970s. These ranged from the large Snow Valley in Manchester to the small practice hill at Green Mountain College in Poultney. Their histories are all accompanied with photographs and reproductions of brochures and such.

Only a few were left undocumented, just listed at the beginning of each chapter. And there, on page 27, I read the following description of one of the truly lost of the lost ski areas: "Burnham Hollow, Middletown Springs: According to John Williams, who was a member of the Burnham Hollow Ski Club, this rope tow was started and operated by Charles and Katie Colvin in the 1950s. Williams remembers that access came from a suspension bridge over the Poultney River." Since reading that, I have learned that some of that statement is true, and some is not.

Well, a few days later, I was at a New Year's Eve Party at Matt and Trish Peschl's place. They live in the Burnham Hollow area, and knowing they know the woods around their place very well, I asked Matt if he had ever come across signs of a ski area. A big smile came on his face, and he said, "Yes. You're standing on it." Turns out his house is on the slope, and he and Trish have come across remnants of the rope tow on the hill above their house.

Well, a few weeks later, I was having breakfast with Chuck Colvin at the weekly Poultney Rotary Club meeting, and I mentioned that I had been reading about him in a history book. Trust me: most people do not like being told they are in a history book! But Chuck thought for a while, and said, "Oh, yeah. That was a long time ago. I'd almost forgotten about that." continued on page 2 . . .

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Again I am pleased to share my thanks to all board members and volunteers for the efforts put into another exciting and fun Strawberry Festival this year. My thanks also goes out to the entire community of artisans that came for the event and of course all of our members and friends from the community who came to enjoy a beautiful afternoon in Middletown Springs.

The success of the Historical Society is partly due to the volunteer board members and activities such as Maple and Strawberry Festivals. More importantly is the participation of families and individuals in and out of our town as members. I invite all of you who have not had a chance to refer a new member to please do so in the next couple of weeks.

With the Annual Meeting upon us I welcome your feedback on anything of interest or in need of improvement. I also would like to inform you that the MSHS website will be undergoing several changes to allow for better use of social network tools to get the word out on many activities for the Society. www.middletownspringshistoricalsociety.org

Enjoy the latter part of our summer in Vermont.
Regards,

To make a long story short, a year later, in May 2012, Matt, Trish, Chuck (Katie could not make it that day), David Wright and I walked the old ski area site, as Chuck told us about where things had been. Later, Mark Raymond, whose Norton family relatives lived across the street from the area, dug up an early brochure for the ski area.

So, over the last year and a half, we have been able to unearth artifacts, ephemera, and memories of an aspect of Middletown Springs that may otherwise have been lost. A small exhibit of Burnham Hollow Ski Area is now part of the Timeline exhibit in the Adams House auditorium

Here is some of what we now know:

The Burnham Hollow Ski Area operated between 1949 and 1954.

George Greene created the ski area, and after few years turned it over to Chuck and Katie Colvin of Poultney, who ran the area for two years.

The area was open on weekends, and attracted an average of 100 skiers per day. Skiers parked their cars in the pasture at the base of Norton Road, walked across Route 133 and crossed the Poultney River on a pedestrian suspension bridge. A warming hut greeted visitors with offers of hot dogs, soda, coffee, hot chocolate and candy. That was also where skiers bought their $1 per day tow passes.

The thousand-foot-long rope tow ran to the top of the ski trails on the north face of Barker Mountain.

Society Promotes Historic Preservation Values in New Town Office design

Society trustees have advocated for historic preservation guidelines in the design of the Town Office, proposed for a crucial site on the south side of the Town Green. Voters at Town Meeting approved money for the purchase of the former Parker gas station lot at the corner of South and East Streets.

At the suggestion of Society trustees, the Town Office Building Committee applied, on behalf of the Town, to Preservation Trust of Vermont for a grant to fund a study of the historic character of the buildings (past and present) surrounding the Green, and its influence on the design of the future building.

The location of the Parker property on the green at the four corners is tremendously significant since it is in the heart of both the village and the Middletown Springs Historic District. The National Register Nomination Form, filed in 1985, which established the Historic District notes that "Only on the south side of East Street, along the southern end of the green, is there a significant gap in the (historic) district, where a fire cleared several buildings in 1920....". With the purchase of this property and the siting of an appropriate structure, the Town has the opportunity to restore some of the visual integrity that was lost in that fire by creating a building that will enhance the character of the green for decades to come.

The Preservation Trust grant, which requires a $500 match, was arranged by the Building Committee and approved by the Selectboard. The matching funds were provided by the Historical Society, which has solicited and received pledges from members and friends for that purpose.

Historic preservation architect Thomas Keefe of Middlebury conducted a site visit on July 3. He viewed numerous historic photographs from the Historical Society's collection and received digital copies of those photos for reference. He discussed the project with members of the Historical Society and Building Committee, looked over the town green and Parker's Service Station site, and took photos and notes to assist him in the project.

Mr. Keefe analyzed these documents and other published references and wrote a report and recommendations to the town. The report will be used by the project architects and Building Committee during the design process to assist them in creating a building that blends harmoniously with the others on the green.

While Mr. Keefe's proposal listed the cost for his services at $1,900, he generously offered to cap his fees at $1,000, which is the combined total of the PTV grant and the matching funds provided by the Society. Thanks to Mr. Keefe for his generous donation to the project and for his excellent report!

Vermont History Detective Looks for the Oldest Chair

Textile conservator Michele Pagan presented a glimpse into her work as a textile expert at a meeting of the Middletown Springs Historical Society on Sunday afternoon, August 12

In 2006 the Shelburne Museum commissioned Ms Pagan as a "history detective" to determine the age of a wing back chair in their collection, which a furniture historian had suggested might be the oldest such example in the United States. Shelburne Museum curators also wanted to know what the chair had originally looked like, what upholstery fabric was originally used, and what it would cost to restore it authentically. Michele's resulting research report was accepted for presentation at the 2007 International Conference of Museums annual meeting in Krakow, Poland. Michele recreated this presentation before the Middletown Springs fascinated audience.

Michele Pietryka Pagan is a native Vermonter and a textile conservator in private practice, conserving historic and vintage textiles in Washington, D.C. and Brookfield. She served as director of the Vermont Collections Care Program for the Vermont Museum and Gallery Alliance, and was a chief conservator with the Vermont Painted Theater Curtain Project. She has directed conservation projects for the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the Smithsonian Institution, and the U.S. Department of State.
